

100% Recycled Glass Tiles & Slabs
Bottle Alley Glass from Strata Tiles

What a great story, and amazing collection!

A portfolio of tiles, slabs and work tops made completely from recycled glass bottles. Collected from cities across the UK and kiln fired in the UK, our new Bottle Alley Glass range from Strata Tiles, with its huge ECO credentials is brand new for 2011.

With options to have it cut to almost any size, and colours ranging from arctic whites, whites with speckles of colour, to solid greens and earthy browns, we are confident you will find inspiration in this collection. This stunning product offers you the opportunity to add to your project something uniquely British, incredibly green, inspirationally individual and with a fantastic story behind it.

Crown your project by backlighting it with LED light, like in the image above, and your environment will immediately become the talk of the social circle and a statement of good design.

Art or Science?

Creating slabs from collected recycled glass bottles is definitely an artform rather than a science, and as a result no two slabs are identical - but this is what makes Bottle Alley Glass so appealing to many designers.

Rescuing bottles destined for landfill, Bottle Alley Glass cleans and crushes these bottles before thermally forming new and unique recycled glass.

All the glass we use would normally end up in landfill. We take these bottles and sort them in to colours before cleaning, de-labelling and crushing them. The crushed pieces are called cullet and form the beautiful pattern to our glass. The crushed pieces are then annealed in a large kiln to form our recycled glass products.

Once the glass has cooled it is then trimmed and cut down to the final size, from large worktops to individual tiles. The edges are then polished to create the finished piece before shipping them to the client.
