

Home Offices & Garden Rooms

An oak framed building is an ideal way of achieving detached living space should you need an area to work, or even just relax, away from the main house. Garden Offices have particularly come into fashion over the last decade or so as homeowners seek to reduce arduous commutes whilst still benefitting from a dedicated working space.

More general garden rooms remain ever popular. In addition to their traditional uses as a sun-trap or relaxation spot, they can double up to provide additional accommodation and storage areas. Unlike other structures, an oak frame will blend beautifully into your surroundings and can still be fitted out to an extremely high specification. If they are kept to a single storey, there is also a possibility that they could benefit from Permitted Development Rights.

Nestling in a corner of the garden, a home office provides a working environment away from everyday distractions.

A combination of buildings will add versatility