

Lang+Fulton worked closely with Keppie Design to provide fencing, gates and screening panels for the new BBC Scotland HQ at Pacific Quay, site of the old Govan docks in Glasgow.

The robust Roma-4 grating fence with a 30x4mm flat bar was chosen not only to meet the required high level of security but also to complement the remarkable glass façade of David Chipperfield Architects' competition winning scheme. Both the fencing and framed panels, which enclose a covered parking area, were supplied in a durable hot-dip galvanised finish for the exposed position, adjacent to the river Clyde.

This landmark project forms an exciting step in the continued development and regeneration of an important location close to the heart of the city.

Aperture: 63x132mm
Fence: 141 metres (2.2m high)
Gates: 3 double and 1 single-leaf
Screening Panels:
120m² framed to custom sizes
